WELCOME

Absence makes the heart grow fonder – that certainly seems to ring true in 2022 with events and travel returning to our minds. After a two-year hiatus, we are glad to be back on track at the Marina Bay Street Circuit once again, as we embark on a new seven-year term. It is good to get back to delivering a world-class experience at the Formula 1 Singapore Airlines Singapore Grand Prix 2022.

On-track, it's set to be a thrilling spectacle as the cars thread the barriers once again on the streets of Singapore. With his dominant lead in the championship, all eyes will be on Red Bull's Max Verstappen, but anything can happen on the challenging Marina Bay Street Circuit. The track is easy on the eye, but tough on the cars and drivers.

Four new drivers will be taking on the 23-turn track this year: Alfa Romeo's Zhou Guanyu, AlphaTauri's Yuki Tsunoda, Haas' Mick Schumacher, and Williams' Nicholas Latifi. Meanwhile, Sebastian Vettel is set to drive his last Formula 1 Singapore Grand Prix. He still holds the record for the most number of victories at this circuit with a total of five wins.

Supporting the F1 action this year are the debuts of the all-female international single-seater W Series and Asia's GT3/ GTM and GTC supercar race TSS The Super Series at the Marina Bay Street Circuit. For the W Series, it is also their first ever race in Asia.

If all the engine revving does not bring music to your ears, then the off-track entertainment certainly will. This year's acts include Marshmello, Westlife, Green Day, Black Eyed Peas, Suede, The Kid LAROI, and TLC.

As always, our experienced media team is here to smooth your path and help you share the event's brilliant stories with the world. We welcome you, no matter if this is your first time or your 13th, and we wish you an enjoyable and productive weekend in Singapore.

2022 PREVIEW OF THE F1 AND SUPPORT RACES

The racing at the Formula 1 Singapore Airlines Singapore Grand Prix 2022 will be thrilling, with W Series and TSS The Super Series supporting the F1 action.

The Formula 1 Singapore Grand Prix has long been world famous for its off-track entertainment, including the world's hottest music acts on-stage, with this year's epic headliners led by DJ Marshmello, Westlife, Green Day, Black Eyed Peas, Suede, The Kid LAROI, and TLC.

But, the action on-track at the 5.063km 23-turn Marina Bay Street Circuit is just as hot, with the natural focus on the pinnacle of motorsport, F1.

Kevin Magnussen, who returned to the sport and the Haas team this year, after a season out on the sidelines, still owns the lap record, a 1:41.905, which he set in 2018 – incredibly en-route to 18th place. But, the great Dane knows how tough Singapore can be – with temperatures in the cockpit up to 60 degrees Celsius at racing speeds.

"It's really a physical race for different reasons," Magnussen says. "One, it's really hot. Two, you don't ever really get any rest on the lap. You're constantly working the steering wheel. There's not a lot of straight line on the track. Three, because the average speed of a lap is so low, the race usually goes to the two-hour time limit."

Those demands, however, are also going to be faced by the support races, all-female single-seater open wheel competition W Series and TSS The Super Series.

W Series has taken the world by storm as the only free-to-enter all-female single-seater open wheel category, which is not only providing a new path to the top for those who dream of making it to F1, but $1.5 million US dollars in total prize money pot to help fund drives further up the chain.

Jamie Chadwick is W Series' top gun, en-route to her third-straight title. Chadwick has won five of the six races held so far in 2022 – and has not been off the podium this season, with her other result second in Hungary. Fellow Brit Alice Powell took victory there in Budapest, as her third visit to the podium in 2022.

Delivering the best high-octane action from Asia, TSS The Super Series (TSS) brings three classes into one at the Marina Bay Street Circuit – with their GT3, GTM and GTC entrants in sleek and sculpted supercars. All the top marques are there, including Ferrari, Lamborghini, Porsche and more.

The Formula 1 Singapore Airlines Singapore Grand Prix 2022 comes right in the middle of TSS's calendar with bragging rights on the line for Singapore winners.
