Reason The Stewards examined video evidence. They summoned the Driver of Car 21 and the team representative (document 41) but the driver did not attend. This was accepted by the Stewards.

During the session Car 6 (Goethe) collided with the tyre barrier at the exit of Turn 7 which caused a red flag and necessitated repairs to the barrier. The Race Director considered that there was insufficient time remaining to complete the repairs and resume the session before the scheduled start time for the following category on the program. At 15:39 the Race Director announced that the session would not resume. The announcement was made by radio to all teams and was posted on the timing screen.

Video evidence showed mechanics for Car 21 lift Car 21 approximately 2 minutes after that announcement and commence to remove the tyres from Car 21 and replace these tyres with another set. Shortly thereafter the Race Director reminded all teams that all Cars were under parc ferme regulations and no work on them was permitted. Subsequently the team removed the replaced tyres and refitted the tyres which had been on the Car when the session was declared over.

The team representative accepted that when the Race Director announced that the session would not resume, the session had ended and all cars were under parc ferme regulations which prohibit any work being performed on a car, including the removal and replacement of tyres. He explained that the team had earlier fitted new tyres to Car 21 in anticipation that the session would resume when Car 6 was recovered. He explained that when he heard the Race Director's announcement that the session would not resume and saw that message on the timing screen, he failed to recognise that this meant that parc ferme regulations would immediately apply and failed to warn the engineer accordingly. The engineer did not want to scrub the new tyres when Car 21 was driven to the paddock and instructed the mechanics to replace those tyres with the ones that had just been removed. Then, after the team representative heard and saw the message from the Race Director reminding teams that cars had been under parc ferme regulations from the announcement that the session would not resume, the team representative instructed the mechanics to remove the old set and replace them with the new set which were on the car at the start of parc ferme.

Having considered the matter extensively, the stewards determined that the changing of the tyres was a breach of parc ferme regulations. The circumstances of the ending of this session were unusual and the stewards accept that it might not have been immediately apparent to all teams that the Race Director's announcement that the session would not resume meant that parc ferme regulations immediately applied to all the cars in the pit lane under red flag when ordinarily the session would end with cars crossing the Control Line on the track. In this case the breach was a consequence of a mistake by the team which gave no sporting advantage. Moreover, the team attempted to undo their mistake by replacing the new tyres to avoid any suggestion that by replacing them in breach of parc ferme regulations they had avoided scrubbing a set of new tyres on the transit back to the paddock. However, the absence of intent or of a sporting advantage from a parc ferme or technical infringement does not render a competitor immune from the accepted penalty of disqualification.

Competitors are reminded that they have the right to appeal certain decisions of the Stewards, in accordance with Article 15 of the FIA International Sporting Code and Chapter 4 of the FIA Judicial and Disciplinary Rules, within applicable time limits.
