DID YOU KNOW?

In 2013 the 6 Hours of Silverstone became the opening race of the season and the Royal Automobile Club Tourist Trophy was awarded to the overall winners for the first time, who were Tom Kristensen, Loic Duval and Allan McNish in an Audi R18 e-tron quattro, the first time Audi's name has appeared on the Tourist Trophy roll of honour.

In 2014 the winners were Anthony Davidson, Sebastien Buemi and Nicolas Lapierre in a Toyota TS040, also the first time Toyota has won the Tourist Trophy.

In 2013 and 2014 the winners of the Tourist Trophy went on to become the World Endurance Champions.

Over 100,000 spectators have travelled to Silverstone to see the 6 Hours of Silverstone since 2012.

The Royal Automobile Club Tourist Trophy was first awarded in 1905 to John Napier driving an Arrol-Johnston after a 6-hour race on the Isle of Man. At 110 years old the Tourist Trophy is the oldest motorsport trophy still being contested.

Porsche is the only manufacturer competing in the WEC not to have won the Tourist Trophy. Audi has two victories, Toyota one, Nissan two, Aston Martin five and Ferrari the most with six wins.

Sir Stirling Moss has won the Tourist Trophy more than any other driver - seven times in all: twice in an Aston Martin ('58, '59) and twice in a Ferrari ('60, '61). He also won twice in a Jaguar and once in a Mercedes-Benz.

In LMGTE Pro, honours are shared between the three manufacturers. Ferrari won in 2012, Aston Martin won in 2013 and Porsche won in 2014.
