Track History

In early 1920, the village of Francorchamps remained quiet, nestled near the Moors, until Jules de Thier and Henri Langlois Van Ophem envisioned a racing track connecting Malmedy, Stavelot, and Francorchamps. They saw potential in the hilly landscape for high-speed races, close to Spa, a hub for car races and hydrotherapy.

Though the first race was planned for August 1921, it was canceled due to low participation, leaving motorcyclists to inaugurate the track, with motorists following in 1922. In 1924, the first 24 Hours of Francorchamps took place, and the European Grand Prix debuted in 1925, won by Antonio Ascari.

From the mid-1920s until World War II, the track hosted major events like the 24 Hours of Francorchamps and the Belgian Grand Prix. In 1939, an artificial curve, "raidillon," was added, making it one of Europe's fastest tracks.

Post-World War II, racing resumed in 1947 with notable events like the Motorcycles and Cars Grand Prix. By the late 1950s, additional races were introduced, but safety concerns in the 1960s led to the final Formula 1 Grand Prix on the original track in 1970.

In response to safety demands, a new seven-kilometer track opened in 1979, retaining much of the original's charm while enhancing safety. The Belgian Formula 1 Grand Prix returned, and Francorchamps flourished, hosting numerous events.

Track History

In the 1980s and 1990s, the track adapted to meet FIA safety standards and became a permanent circuit. By the early 2000s, Francorchamps was popular for races and club events. However, a 1997 Belgian law banning tobacco advertising jeopardized the Grand Prix, leading to its 2003 cancellation.

Major renovations in 2006, including new pits and grandstands, modernized Francorchamps, securing its status as a premier racing venue. The track now hosts all major world championships, with plans to include the international motorbike championship, solidifying its reputation as the world's best track.

In 2007, Spa-Francorchamps welcomed the return of Formula 1 after a one-year absence. The circuit had undergone significant upgrades, including the reconfiguration of the Bus Stop chicane. These enhancements improved safety and the spectator experience, ensuring the track met modern standards.

Since 2020, the circuit has seen further enhancements, including the addition of new grandstands. The new grandstands offer better views of the track, allowing fans to enjoy the action from prime vantage points. Modern amenities have been incorporated, providing greater comfort and convenience for spectators. These improvements include more spacious seating, better access routes, and enhanced facilities such as restrooms and food services.
